FATHER CRONIN NAMED RECTOR

Will Take Charge of St. Mary's Parish in Richmond Succeeding the Rev. J. F. Mattingly.

LAST SERVICES TOMORROW

Had Charge of Local Catholic Church Almost Six Years—Deep Regret Expressed by All.

The Rev. Walter J. Cronin will conduct his last services tomorrow at the St. Mary's Catholic church as he will leave next week to take charge of the St. Mary's parish in Richmond. His appointment as rector of the Richmond church to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the Rev. J. F. Mattingly became known yesterday.

The Rev. Father Cronin came to the local church in July, 1906, from Clinton, Ind. During his charge here he has made innumerable friends, both in and out of the church. His appointment to the rectorship comes as a promotion and has been hanging fire for some time. While it has been generally known that the Rev. Father Cronin was to leave this city, the announcement nevertheless caused considerable surprise and deep regret is expressed on all sides. "I sincerely hate to leave Rushville," said Father Cronin today, "as I have some very dear friends here, both in the church and out, but it is the law of the church that I go to Richmond."

During the six years that he has been here the church has prospered and he was instrumental in securing many improvements, the greatest of these improvements was the erecting of the magnificent parsonage. The parsonage was built at an expenditure of about $12,000.

The Rev. Father Cronin is 38 years old, and has been a priest for thirteen years. He is a native of Terre Haute, and was educated at St. Meinard's seminary in Spencer county. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus and is State chaplain of the organization.

His appointment to the Richmond church was made by Bishop Chatard of the Indianapolis diocese last Tuesday. It is understood that there were no applicants for the place and that no candidate appeared before the examination college at Indianapolis March 17, which met to search into the qualifications of possible applicants.

St. Mary's congregation in Richmond through the good will of the bishop is an irremovable charge, and a priest serving it cannot be assigned elsewhere by the bishop without the consent of the priest. After the withdrawal of Father Mattingly from St. Mary's, notices were sent to eligible priests notifying them that examinations for the place were in order. As no priests responded, it was optional with the bishop to name a successor and Father Cronin was his choice.

The Rev. Michael W. Lyons of Washington, Ind., will succeed Father Cronin in the church here. A farewell reception will be tendered the Rev. Father Cronin sometime next week.

GOES TO JAIL.

Newcastle Courier: Herbert Estill, the Knightstown gas well cleaner, was arraigned in the police court Friday on a drunk charge and pleaded guilty. As it was his second offense he was fined $5 and costs. Estill could not pay and went to jail for fifteen days.

PLANS ARE GIVEN BOOST

Uniforms For Base Ball Team Are Assured.

The plans for a base ball team this year in Rushville are progressing rapidly and the proposition seems to be meeting with approval. A local clothing store has come forward and offered to uniform the team. Outside of the enthusiastic talk among the fans this is the first real offer towards organizing a team and will go a long ways in helping F. A. Maibaugh get a start. All Mr. Maibaugh asks is an even break and will take care of the team if given the proper encouragement. New and promising material is heard of almost daily and the fans believe a strong team can be produced.

ATTEMPTS TO HOLD UP R. F. SCUDDER

Man With Revolver Stops Local Man on Streets of Anderson—Threatens to Shoot.

FOLLOWS FROM BIG 4 DEPOT

R. F. Scudder met with a thrilling experience in Anderson one night this week, which he is not likely to forget for many days. An attempt to hold up Mr. Scudder was made, but he managed to escape even after his life had been threatened.

Mr. Scudder was on his way from the Big Four depot to the Grand hotel and when within about two blocks of the hotel was ordered at the point of a revolver to throw up his hands. Mr. Scudder pretended not to hear and kept on walking. The would-be hold-up man shouted: "Stop or I'll kill you." On reaching the hotel the police were notified, but no trace of the man found. Mr. Scudder says the stranger followed him from the depot and crossed over to his side of the street under an electric light. "I always had a feeling," said Mr. Scudder today, "that if I was held up I would do what the man told me. But I didn't even stop to think when that man came at me and the only thing I did was to side-step and kept on going. Naturally I was scared and was as white as a sheet when I reached the hotel. He may have pulled the trigger, but if he did the cartridge failed to explode."

DUE IN COLOMBO SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Cambern Enjoy Calcutta Visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Cambern, who are on a world cruise on the Hamburg-American line's steamship, Cleveland, are due to land at Colombo, Ceylon, tomorrow. They will be there Sunday and Monday and then will sail for Bombay. Last week the party was in Rangoon, and most of this week has been spent in Calcutta. This was probably the most interesting stop of the whole cruise, according to cables to the company's New York offices. A special train carried a number of the party from Diamond Harbor to Calcutta. Calcutta is of historic value in that it is the birthplace of William Makepeace Thackeray. It is the capital of Bengal and is the largest city in India. The city is located about the middle of the torrid zone and has a population of a million. One-third of the trade of India passes through the city.

SAY REPUTATION OF COOK WAS BAD

Witnesses in Price Trial at Greensburg Today Tell of Tenant's Life in South.

LIVED IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Testify Cook Once Threatened to Cut Employer's Heart Out and Hang it on Brier.

Today was given over by the defense in the case of the State against Zachariah Price, who is being tried for the murder of his tenant at Greensburg, to the testimony of character witnesses. The evidence in the main tended to show that Fletcher Cook, the man killed by Price, was a bad man and had a poor reputation for peacefulness, both in Jennings county, and in his former home in North Carolina.

It was brought out conclusively by the attorneys for the defendant that Cook was known as a bad man in North Carolina, and that he was of a very boastful nature. Charles Brooks, Ed Galyon, Mason McHamon and Otis Baker were some of the more important witnesses of the day.

Galyon, according to his testimony, lived seven or eight miles from Cook when they both resided in North Carolina. He said Cook's reputation there was bad, and that he had once told Price he had better be careful of Cook.

Alfred Price, son of Ed Price, who is a nephew of the defendant, testified that on October 11, last year, he and Cook were working at a saw-mill in Jennings county, when Mrs. Cook came to the mill and called her husband away after a whispered conversation. Later the witness said, Cook returned and told the men he had just kicked Roy Redear, a boy who lived at the Price farm, out into the road. He is alleged to have said at the time, according to the witness, "If Price takes this up, I'll cut his heart out and hang it on the brier."

Mason McHamon, the next witness, who was working at the mill at the same time, confirms the testimony of Alfred Price. He said neither he nor Alfred Price told the defendant.

Otis Baker testified he passed the Price farm one morning during wheat sowing time last fall, and that he stopped and talked to Cook. He said Cook told him of a disagreement he had with Price and then declared: "If I don't sow that wheat, by ——— Zack Price never will either."

It has been definitely settled that Zachariah Price, accused of the murder of Fletcher Cook, will go upon the witness stand and give his version of the affair, according to Greensburg newspapers.

Attorney Frank Hamilton of counsel for the defense, stated Friday that Price would testify, but he was unable to say just when that would be. Price will be the last witness for the defense. What he has to say will be held for the last.

The defense has set up the plea of self-defense and Price will be given an opportunity to tell why and how he shot Cook.

Unusual interest will be taken in whatever Price may have to say. He has a number of acquaintances in Decatur county and some of his friends in this county have said they will go to hear the defendant's testimony.

After the State rested its case yesterday afternoon and Mrs. Cook, wife of the murdered man, had testified a second time, Charles P. Jordan, coronor of Jennings county, was called to the stand. His testimony was of little importance. It was stated then Willie Campbell, the State's star witness, would be used by the defense.

Interest in the case is increasing Continued on page eight.

ANNUAL MEET TAME AFFAIR

Four Directors of Rushville Co-Operative Telephone Company Are Re-Elected by Acclamation.

OPPOSITION DID NOT APPEAR

Report of Manager Shows Condition is Flourishing—$9,300 Paid on Debt in Year.

The annual meeting of the Rushville Co-Operative Telephone Company, held in the court house last night, was a tame affair as compared to the annual meeting last year. Indications yesterday were that a slate would be placed in the field last night in opposition to two of the directors who came up for re-election, but there was no force to the opposition.

Four directors were re-elected for a second term unanimously. They were Ben L. McFarlan, John D. Megee, J. M. Amos and William A. Jones. They were re-elected to serve a term of two years. There are seven directors, three being elected one year and four the next. The other three directors, elected last year are: Frank Reynolds, John H. Frazee and Robert L. Tompkins.

It was rumored yesterday that Howard E. Barrett, stockholder and former director, planned to bring enough proxies to the meeting last night to defeat Ben L. McFarlan and John D. Megee. But there was no attempt of that sort made at the meeting and everything passed off smoothly, the re-elections being made by acclamation.

Last year at the annual meeting the question of raising the phone rate was up for discussion. It had been put up to the directors, and the matter had to be settled by the stockholders. At that time the court house assembly room was filled with stockholders, and the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of leaving the rates the same. About fifty stockholders attended last night.

The annual report of W. T. Jackson, secretary and manager, revealed that the company is in a flourishing condition, and that it has been very satisfactorily managed last year.

The report showed that the present indebtedness of the company is $16,700. The profits of the company during the year ending April first, were such that $9,300 could be paid on the indebtedness during the year. The indebtedness a year ago was $26,000. The report shows the company is indebted to the Rushville National bank in the sum of $8,550, and the Rush County National bank, $8,150. The report continues: "We owe no other debts. The plant is in good condition and repair."

The report indicated that the balance on hand April first, 1911 was $47.27, and on last April first, $208.04. The total receipts for the year were $21,161.78. The total disbursements for the year, not including the amount paid on the indebtedness were $17,701.01.

The report shows further there are now 1309 telephone subscribers, forty-three of that number having been put on since April, 1911.

The company assumed a debt of about forty thousand dollars when the new automatic system was put in in November, 1907. The company has been gradually reducing the debt, and will soon be free from the incumbrance. The new system has met with universal approval and the management of the company has often been complimented for its thrift and industry, which keeps the phone rates low, as compared with most cities, and at the same time gives its patrons a service that is better than the ordinary.

FIRST STORM OF SEASON

High Wind Does Considerable Damage Over the City.

The first thunder storm of the season passed over Rushville last evening about seven o'clock, and it was followed by a heavy downpour of rain which did not continue long. The electrical display was preceded by a very strong wind which did small damage about the city. Tree limbs were torn off and the sidewalks were covered with buds from the shade trees. Signs and awnings in the downtown district were damaged by the wind.

RESIGNS BECAUSE OF POOR HEALTH

Miss Frances Murphy Gives up Position in Anderson High School, Held Two Years.

WILL BE WEDDED IN SUMMER

Miss Frances Murphy, who lived in Rush county all her life until a few years ago, and who is well known here, has given up her position in the Anderson high school on account of ill health. She has been an instructor there for two years. Miss Murphy moved from here with her mother when she entered Indiana University at Bloomington. She was graduated from the University. Miss Murphy will be married this summer to John Baker, an attorney of Indianapolis. Mr. Baker is a law partner of Judge Will J. Henley, formerly of this city.

SECOND NURSE IS VICTIM OF DISEASE

Theresa Sweetman, Who Went to the Brooks Farm to Care For Sister, Takes Scarlet Fever.

IS NINTH PERSON INFECTED

The patients at the home of Mrs. Laura Brooks in Noble township, where two deaths from scarlet fever have occurred recently, are gradually improving, and it is expected they will all recover. At one time eight persons were sick with the disease. Miss May Sweetman who went there to nurse the patients, and who was afflicted herself, is being cared for by her sister, Miss Theresa Sweetman of Indianapolis, who has just finished a training course in that city.

Later word from the Brooks farm today is to the effect that Miss Theresa Sweetman has fallen victim to the disease. According to the attending physician, Dr. Sipe of Orange, she is not very ill and she is not expected to feel any bad effects from the ailment. The form of scarlet fever which prevails there is said to be more severe than any which has been in this county in years. Miss Sweetman is the ninth person at the Brooks farm to suffer with the disease.

WILL BE LIGHTEST CROP IN 30 YEARS

Farmers Say Now There is no Doubt About Condition of Wheat in Rush.

FULLY HALF TO BE PLOWED UP

Proportionately as Acreage Will be Small, Oats and Corn Will Be Increased.

Fully half of the fields in Rush county which were sown in wheat last fall will be plowed up and put in either oats or corn this spring.

The foregoing statement is based on information obtained from farmers and local grain dealers. They say that the present indications are that Rush county will have the lightest wheat crop it has had in thirty years.

Fears expressed early in March by farmers that nearly all the wheat in the county had been killed, were not taken seriously. Now that the frost is gone and the true condition is discernable it is apparent that the misgivings of the farmers were well founded.

Here and there over the county, in fields sheltered by woodlands, there is a fair stand of wheat left, but such fields are few and far between. In a large majority of cases there are either no live roots left or the wheat that is left growing is so thin and sickly as not to be worth saving.

"Rush county will not harvest enough wheat this year to supply flour to the people who live within its borders," said one grain man. "I never before saw as complete a failure of a wheat crop threatened in this locality. To begin with, the acreage this year is small. The rains last fall kept the farmers from sowing many fields that had been set apart for wheat. Now, with the farmers plowing up more than half of their wheat fields and with the crop that is left looking like it would not make to exceed half of an average yield, I feel that I am warranted in saying Rush county will now grow enough wheat this year to supply itself with bread."

"Proportionately as the acreage left in wheat will be small, the acreage given over to oats and corn will be large. The farmers can not afford

ITALIANS AGREE TO LEAVE COUNTY

Dagos Taken in Knightstown Raid Pay Heavy Fines in Henry Circuit Court.

OPERATED A "BLIND TIGER"

With the charge of selling liquor to minors hanging over their heads, James Luciana and Emmett Dersorarie, two Italians arrested in the Knightstown blind tiger raids Monday night, have left the county with the promise never to return, says the Newcastle Courier. They were arraigned before Judge Ed Jackson and pleaded guilty to the charge of selling without a license. Each paid a fine and costs amounting to $71. They then made immediate arrangements to get out of the county.

Otto Gorman, the Italian, who pleaded guilty to the charge of giving liquor to Margaret Hart, was also included in the banished list. He and his countrymen left for Richmond and will be sent from there to Piqua, Ohio, to work on the railroad operations in that vicinity.

"I wanted to pay about $1000 for a car. It had to be big enough to hold five people, powerful enough to climb hills, well-built, well-appointed, stylish, and above all, dependable—for it had to last. I couldn't buy a new car every year."

At the big National Motor Shows, where values were carefully compared by everyone looking for a moderate-priced car, the "Mascotte" was undoubtedly the leader. Come and see the "Mascotte" and you'll approve the public's judgment.

It is big enough, powerful enough and the most stylish, low-priced car shown. Indeed, it compared favorably with any car at the Shows. We only ask you to judge the style and finish for yourself.

It's well built, like all Maxwells. If they weren't well built, there wouldn't be 51,000 of them in use. Doctors, who demand constant, unfailing service, drive 17,000 Maxwell cars. None but a dependable car could meet this test—and an economical car to run as well.

And it will last as long as the most expensive cars made. This is proved by State registrations in New York, where last year 91 per cent of the 1905 Maxwells were again registered after seven years' continuous service. No car at any price has an equal record.

Fore-door, flush-side, five-passenger body. A 25 horse-power, four cylinder motor. Dual ignition, sliding gear transmission, multiple disc clutch, shaft drive, semi-floating rear axle. Irreversible steering gear, double acting brakes, long resilient imported steel springs. 32-inch wheels and 104-inch wheel-base. Finished in blue-black with gray wheels, upholstered and appointed with every provision for comfort. Equipped with magneto, generator, two gas lamps, three oil lamps, horn, tool kit, jack, pump, tire repair kit, foot and robe rails. Price, $980 f.o.b. factory, top extra.

Other models from $600 to $1480, including self-starting, fully-equipped duplicate of the Glidden Tour Winner.

Adulterated Air Kills Thousands

Adulterated air killed 8,018 people in Indiana in 1911, brought coughs, colds, lagrippe and pneumonia to over 1,000,000 and started at least 4,000 on the consumption trail.

If opposition to one-tenth of the popular force prevailing against adulterated foods could be aroused against adulterated air, the people would profit enormously in money, strength and happiness. Not a death or case of illness has been reported as cause by adulterated food in Indiana in ten years.

Sausage adulterated with corn meal will not cause illness, nor will butter adulterated with oleomarine, nor milk with water, nor maple syrup with sugar syrup, nor molasses with glucose, nor lard with vegetable or beef fat, nor pepper with ground cocoa shells, nor whisky blended with water, high wine and prune juice, nor candy with glucose, nor olive oil with cottonseed oil. Over 95 per centum of all adulterants are harmless to health. They affect mostly the pocket of the consumer and the morals of the adulterator. But—adulterated air sickens and kills thousands. Adulterated air costs the people one hundred dollars to one for adulterated foods.

Adulterated air causes anemia, malnutrition, headache, weakness, dullness, dizziness and other ills and symptoms, and by reducing vitality reduces resistance and thus disease causing microbes are admitted to the body. Consumption, lagrippe, cold and pneumonia microbes cannot find entrance into the lungs until the delicate vascular net work of the latter has been abused by liberal allowances of adulterated air for a quarter or less period of time. Fresh air is the premier tonic, vitalizer and appetizer. Every business man who leaves his stuffy office and goes fishing will testify to this statement. He leaves early in the morning in the crisp fresh air, and by noon his appetite is sharp, his food tastes as it did in boyhood and digestion is vigorous. That night his pillow is not hot, he does not toss and lie awake, but goes to sleep immediately and awakes refreshed. The appetite, the delicious taste, the restful sleep comes from the unadulterated air. The worms and minnows he impails upon his hook do not bring him these blessings, nor does the fruitless whipping of the stream do it, except as these help to fill him with unadulterated air.

Adulterated air costs the people of Indiana not a penny less than $10,000,000 annually. The doctors, the druggists, the coffin makers and the undertakers wax fat because of the universal and excessive use of adulterated air. When it does not sicken and kill adulterated air reduces efficiency. The efficiency of school children increases 25 to 40 per centum by taking them out of indoor rooms and placing them at their desks out of doors. They grow rosy on unadulterated air; they are eager to study and to work; appetite and digestion returns; they grow fat, strong and happy.

Everywhere we find adulterated air. In editorial rooms, lawyers' offices, doctors' offices, ministers' studies, court rooms, legislative halls, school rooms, churches, theaters, street cars, steam cars, trolley cars, sleeping cars, bed rooms, parlors, libraries, railway stations, taxicabs, dry good stores, quick lunch rooms. In moving picture shows thousands daily suck in, breathe in, absorb and revel in adulterated air. No wonder that almost one thousand die every month in Indiana from breathing adulterated air. No wonder that thousands are made sick. The wonder is—that more danger is not done.

With great reluctance we have passed and enforced laws against adulterated foods, which, so far as reported, have not caused a single death, and now do you think it would be wise to pass laws against adulterated air which causes such awful havoc of health, life, happiness and wealth? It is not likely if we could swat some one for supplying us with adulterated air we would do it as eagerly as we now swat those who supply us with adulterated foods?

Let us begin by swating the moving pictures theaters, then extend it to the street cars, the suburbs and steam cars. Next, swat the court rooms, the council chambers and the legislature halls. Then swat the hotel lobbies, the state house corridors, the school rooms, and, above all, swat and reswat the Tomlinson hall market house. It is positively rotten. At last, let us swat our office, bed rooms, parlors and libraries. Oh, the years we waste, the strength we waste, the happiness we waste, the wealth we waste through breathing adulterated air.

Welcome to Our City.

They put him down to make a speech To welcome them to town, Forgetting that, whatever he does, He's prone to do it—brown. And when they introduced him They hailed him with a shout, Until he sadly queried, "Does Your husband know you're out?"

He spoke of hats, he spoke of law, He spoke of many things, He spoke of ash can cabbages And wise domestic kings; He spoke of strikes and Scripture In a manner most devout, But ended up by asking, "Does Your husband know you're out?"

They put him down to welcome them, For none of them foresaw He'd welcome them with history And quote the common law: He talked, all right, but just the same, His exit was a rout, For he welcomed them as follows: "Does Your husband know you're out?"

Modesty vs. Vanity.

A little hen of modest mien,
And not a whit too fat,
Just went, without a bit of fuss,
And laid an egg like that:

And when she laid that good-sized egg
Just like a modest bird,
She went and picked her living up,
Without a single word.
Another hen, much larger, too,
Who strutted and looked wise,
Just fussed about before she laid
A dinky egg this size:

And when she'd laid this little egg
She had to have her say,
So she went out and cackled, cackled,
Cackled half the day.

GREAT STAKES ARE AT ISSUE

The Eyes of Republicans Turn to Pennsylvania Today.

CRISIS IN TAFT-TEDDY FEUD

Managers of Both Wings of the Party Are Showing More Nervousness Than They Have at Any Other Time in the Fight—Defeat for President in Pennsylvania Would Give Impetus to Compromise Candidate Talk.

Washington, April 13.—That today's primaries in Pennsylvania will be the crisis in the Roosevelt-Taft campaign for the Republican nomination, is the unanimous opinion of the men in Washington who follow politics. The managers of both wings of the party are keenly alive to the great stakes at issue in the Pennsylvania contest, and both sides are showing more nervousness than they have at any other time in the fight.

Republicans generally acknowledge that if Roosevelt sweeps Pennsylvania today it will be a blow from which the Taft boom will have difficulty in recovering. President Taft's own political managers realize that the eyes of the Republicans of the south are centered on this Pennsylvania contest. Southern delegates to the Republican conventions in years past have been notorious for jumping to the winning band wagon, and if Roosevelt should add Pennsylvania to the prestige that he gained through the Illinois victory, many Republicans fear the president would find some of his southern strength slipping away.

Defeat for the president in Pennsylvania, too, would give impetus to the talk that is now being heard in many quarters of the possibilities of bringing forth a compromise candidate. In the opinion of many political observers the turning of Pennsylvania against Taft would make the selection of a third candidate an absolute necessity, inasmuch as it would demonstrate that President Taft could not hold the Republican strongholds of the country.

POLICE BAFFLED

Massachusetts Has Another Dark Murder Mystery.

Lynn, Mass., April 13.—Through the discovery of the body of George E. Marsh, a wealthy soap manufacturer of this city, lying on the jagged rocks which form the embankment of the state boulevard between this city and Revere, what appears at the present time to be another of the baffling murder mysteries of which Massachusetts has had many in recent years, came to light. Mr. Marsh, who was seventy-five years old, had been shot several times and an autopsy showed that the murder was committed some time between 9 and 10 o'clock Thursday night, the body evidently having been taken in an automobile or carriage along the boulevard and tossed over the fence at the spot where it was found.

The shooting had been done with a 32-caliber automatic revolver. One of the steel-tipped bullets penetrated the heart, another passed through the liver, one penetrated the abdomen and two others made slight wounds upon the head. There were no indications of a struggle having occurred near the place where the body was found, and robbery could not have been the motive, as neither the dead man's watch or money had been taken. The police say they are completely baffled.

New York, April 13.—Julia Sanderson, the actress, has filed suit for a divorce from James F. Sloan, better known as Tod Sloan, the former jockey and now a trainer of race horses and obtained permission to serve her husband by publication at the Hotel Royal, Maison Lafayette, Seine, France on the ground that Sloan never intends to return to this country. Miss Sanderson was married to Sloan in 1907.

GAVE HER LIFE TO GOOD DEEDS

Clara Barton Was the World's Best Loved Woman.

AN INTERNATIONAL HEROINE

Mourning For the Death of This Good Woman Is Not Confined to America, Where She Had Wrought So Wondrously, but in All Parts of the World Where the Red Cross Is Known, There She Is Venerated.

Washington, April 13.—Heroine of war, of pestilence, earthquake and flood, Clara Barton, is dead at her home in Glen Echo Park, Md. She had turned her ninety-first milestone and, though ill for a long time, was courageous and hopeful to the very last.

Miss Barton organized the American Red Cross society, based on the scenes of pain and sorrow she beheld on the battlefields during the civil war, when, as a nurse, she left her little country school and plunged into the fray to alleviate the sufferings of the dying and save those wounded who needed but a touch of care.

Miss Barton, whose international reputation as a war time nurse, philanthropist and charity worker has placed her name among those of the greatest women of modern times, was born in Oxford, Mass., in 1821. Her first occupation, after graduating from the Clinton (N. Y.) Liberal Institute, was that of a school teacher. She followed this vocation for ten years previous to the civil war, giving up her occupation to go to the front with the Union forces as a nurse. Her capacity for work and her executive ability soon won her recognition among those in charge of the battlefield relief work and before the end of the struggle she reached a high place in the ranks of the Red Cross.

After the war, Miss Barton organized a bureau for locating missing soldiers. She started this research department with money out of her own pocket to aid grief-stricken mothers whose boys were missing after the great struggle. Out of the 80,000 inquiries made, Miss Barton was able to trace over 20,000 to a satisfactory conclusion and thus give the parents details of their children's death and the location of their burial places. Congress, in recognition of Miss Barton's work, voted her $15,000.

Miss Barton's labors along these lines proved too great a tax on a constitution tried by the rigors of field service in the civil war and she was obliged to go abroad. While she was in Europe the Franco-Prussian war broke out in 1870 and she organized the relief corps. The brilliancy and bravery with which she ministered to the distressed won her a European reputation that rivaled the love and veneration she inspired in the United States. She was decorated with several honorary orders in recognition of her exploits.

She was first elected president of the American Red Cross in 1881, later organizing an American amendment of the Red Cross to supply relief in all disasters, attending several peace conferences as representative from the United States and taking active interest in relief work in every great disaster of recent years. Miss Barton has been president of the National First Aid association since 1905, and holds diplomas and decorations from Germany, Baden, Austria, Serbia, Turkey, Armenia, Switzerland, Spain, Russia, Belgium; also a vote of thanks from the citizens of Johnstown, Pa. the Texas legislature, etc. She is the only woman for whom a G. A. R. post has been named.

OVER THEIR VETO

Commons Expected to Pass Home Rule Bill Despite the Lords.

London, April 13.—It is evident that the government has little hope that the house of lords will pass the home rule bill, but is confident that there will be no dissolution of parliament until the house of commons is able to pass the measure for the government of Ireland over the lords' veto.

John Redmond and other Irish Nationalists express satisfaction over the measure's reception by the members of the house of commons, which they think augurs its passage by that body with a big majority.

REDUCES DRUNKENNESS

In Connersville Habitual "Booze Fighters" Are Barred From Saloons.

Connersville, Ind., April 13.—Ever since it started here, the listing system for habitual drunkards has worked well. It has now been in force more than six months, and for the last two months there has been an average of only two arrests a week, and the former average was eight. When a man is convicted three times of public intoxication he is rated as an habitual drunkard, and his name is given to all saloons in the city, with instructions not to sell him liquor under any circumstances.

Held on Suspicion.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 13.—Maurice Kellner and Sam Schneider are held here on suspicion of being swindlers.

TELEPHONE NUMBER, 1111.

To Get Good Roads.

N. T. Bachelder, Master of the National Grange, on January 20, 1909, in New York, said:

"I wish as a farmer, and as a representative of farmers, to reply to the charge, often made, that farmers do not appreciate the value or importance of good roads. I can testify from my continuous visits to farming communities in every section of the country, that there is no question on which the farmers are so unanimous, as that improved roads would do more to benefit their condition than any other suggested reform.

"The city or town newspaper knows little or nothing of the Grange educational work for good roads, nor of the patient, untiring efforts of its members, which have now resulted in the general recognition of the principle that the cost of road construction and maintenance should not be borne entirely by the owners of the property through which the road runs.

"It required many years for the farmers, who long ago realized the benefits that better roads would bring to them, to secure the adoption in a few States, of the policy of State aid in road improvement. The policy was but a few years ago regarded as a radical innovation, and it was only after a hard struggle that the farmers were able to convince the law makers of these States that the condition of the road was a matter of public, instead of local concern, and that the work of highway improvement should to a large extent be carried on out of State appropriations."

The Indiana Good Roads Association supports a bill similar to the laws existing in the States referred to, providing for a highway engineer, and board and State aid for the construction and maintenance of the main roads of the State. It is a farmers' bill. Do not let the contractors and the railroad tax farmers kill it in the next legislature.

Quoting again from the Master of the National Grange:

"By far the greater percentage of the roads of the United States was constructed by the farmers at their own expense, and from the viewpoint of the modern scientific road building most of these roads are of an inferior character."

The Master states the condition in Indiana. A great many miles of so-called improved road have been built but they are of an inferior character, and not properly maintained.

What is needed is skilled engineers, better construction, scientific supervision and maintenance, such as exist in New York, New England and 33 other States.

If Uncle Sam should tell the operators and miners that the public ought not to be compelled to suffer for lack of coal, we fear some one would bob up and say that small children should be seen and not heard.

Rudyard Kipling has perpetrated a poem on Irish Home Rule. The penalty for that kind of thing over here is $5.00 for idle and disorderly conduct.

It is proposed to publish the corporation affiliations of congressmen, but we feel confident that none of the Sunday schools will be found to be dominating them.

Sir Bertrand Dawson, physician to King George, has been calling at the White House. Mr. Taft should kick if he charges more than $1.50 for his visit.

From the battered condition of all these hats in the ring, none of them will look very handsome when hung up behind the White House door.

It having been learned that there are seven doubtful voters in Skaguay Alaska, all the presidential candidates are expected to address the Snow-Shoe club of that city on the issues of the campaign.

The committee of the New Mexico legislature favors unseating the alleged bribers. What will become of us if these new States keep on making these reckless innovations?

J. P. Morgan and Kaiser Wilhelm are to meet April 25 at Venice. They should leave their automobiles at home, as they would not run well in the streets of that city.

Great excitement was caused in Washington by the news that a straw ballot of the New York kindergartens showed 7346 majority for Santa Claus for president.

Little Tales of Human Interest

HAD TO TAKE IT.

There is a North Harrison street woman who can take a joke, else she would not have stood what she did from the man who gathers her garbage. It was this way:

This North Harrison street housewife has a good disposition, and she dislikes to refuse an agent, plenty of which are worrying Rushville women nowadays. One day an agent called at her door to sell rugs. She would not buy any. She told him positively that she had no use for them, and besides that she patronized home merchants. The agent insisted and she continued to refuse him. Finally to rid herself of the pest, she gave him a small order.

One day while Mart Clevenger was at this woman's house the rug man came to deliver the order.

"Mart," said the housewife, "I ordered those rugs and I don't want them. Here he comes. You get rid of him as best you can."

Mart did. He squared himself at the front door and waited for the rug agent to appear. When the agent said he had called to deliver, Mart gave him a long line of stuff that probably staggered him. Mart told the agent the woman who ordered the rugs was not responsible and he need not expect her to take them. Mart was standing in the door, and about this time the woman appeared at the top of the stairs.

"There stands the woman who ordered them," said the agent.

"I know it," replied Mart. "Don't say anything to her about it. She doesn't know what she's doin' half the time, and you might as well go on and forget about this sale."

The woman at the house stood at the head of the stairs and heard every word of the conversation. She never uttered a word and consented to anything that Mart had to say about her. She had to be a good sport because she made the bargain.

NOBODY'S FOOL.

Once there was a man whose name was Newton Smith. He was generally known as Newt. It was authentically reported that he was of a family of twenty-two children and that they took turn about sleeping at night. But that has nothing to do with this tale. Newt lived in Dunreith, and one day he was called as a witness in a squire's court. Newt talked very fast.

"What is your name?" asked the attorney.

"Newt. Smith," was his reply.

"Where do you live?"

"Dunreith, Henry county, Indiana."

"What is the county seat of Henry county?"

"Rushville, I'm nobody's fool," replied Newt. hurriedly.

CHILDISH FAITH.

There is a little girl in Rushville who has been a patient sufferer for many months. She has never had good health, and although eight years of age, she has never been able to attend school. She is now compelled to remain in bed all the time.

Recently she received her first communion in the Catholic church. The priest called at her home several times to instruct her for the ceremony that followed. The priest read a story from the Bible of a woman whose daughter was healed by Jesus and made well. The story made a profound impression on the little girl, and she studied over it often. She found a place in the Bible and acted as if she were reading it. One day she looked up at her mother, who is a constant attendant at her side, and said: "Mama, when I get through with the communion, Jesus will make me well, too, won't he?"

LIMITED.

Some time ago a man in a southern township was elected road supervisor. Members of his family considered it quite an honor. The boy of the family, especially, was proud of his father after the office that had been conferred on his parent, and he never lost sight of an opportunity to let his friends know what office his father held.

After the election the boy ran home to his mother and said:

"Mama, we're all road supervisors now, ain't we?"

"Nope," replied his mother, "just me and your pap."

AMUSEMENTS

The Princess has an exceptionally good program tonight. The first picture is a Vitagraph featuring Maurice Costello. It is entitled "For the Honor of the Family." The other is a comedy, "A Cure For Jealousy." Arthur Johnson is seen in the principal role of this production.

The Portola will have a feature program tonight with three reels of pictures. "Tricked Into Happiness" is a Lubin drama. The second picture is an Edison drama. "The Corsican Brothers." The last film is a Kalem, "The Swimming Party." Tuesday and Wednesday nights the feature moving picture production, "Raising of the Maine" will be the attraction.

The Palace will have a well balanced program for its Saturday night patrons with a comedy and a drama. "The Gambler's Heart" is a film that portrays a story of unusual pathos and interest. "A Realistic Make-up," a Great Northern, is a comedy replete with humorous scenes and situations. For Monday night the Palace will have a two-reel production of the life and battles of Daniel Boone. The Palace held its Easter opening last night, and the crowds were good although the weather was inclement.

A stage version of "Little Women" Louise M. Alcott's immortal story, which has been made by Marian de Forest, magazine writer and dramatic critic and produced by William A. Brady, will be the attraction at the Shubert Murat theater, Indianapolis, for five nights, starting Tuesday, April 16. Beginning Wednesday daily matinees will be given.

"Little Women," the play, is in reality "Little Women," the book made into a character comedy in four acts and two scenes, which tell the familiar story of the March girls, Meg, Jo, Beth and Amy, and all those concerned in the development of that story; Laurie, handsome and debonnaire; Professor Bhaer; Mr. and Mrs. March; old Hannah, and Aunt March, the crochety, family scold. Furthermore the story of "Little Women" is really the story of Louisa M. Alcott and her three sisters. Miss Alcott is the original of Jo; Meg is Anna Alcott, her older sister; Beth is Elizabeth Alcott, whose death in girlhood cast a heavy shadow over Louisa. Amy March is May Alcott, and the story of her artistic hopes and dreams is true to life, just as is the account of Jo's endeavors to win fame and fortune through the efforts of her pen, a dream that she lived to see come true in most abundant measure.

Ever since the announcement that William A. Brady was to produce Miss de Forest's play, his office has been overwhelmed with inquiries and the managers all over the country have been clamoring for bookings. But Mr. Brady decided to give Indianapolis an early date. It took eight years of persistent endeavor to secure the consent of Miss Alcott's heirs to having the story made into a play. Permission was finally secured by Miss Jessie Bonstelle and the work of dramatization was given to Miss de Forest.

It were idle at this time to recount the difficulties encountered and overcome, the delays, the disappointments, but the reward came when the Alcott family formally accepted the play, and the necessary contracts were signed. Then began the detail work, securing proper stage effects and costumes (for "Little Women" is dressed in the quaint style of the early '60s) and above all, finding a company of players to adequately interpret the simple, familiar characters.

Word has been received here that Miss Hazel Cox, daughter of Mrs. Anna B. Following the ceremony, which was witnessed by a small number, a wedding supper was served at the physician's home. He is a friend of the bridegroom. That night Dr. and Mrs. Early left for their home in Ruth, Nevada. It will be remembered Miss Cox left here a week ago last Thursday evening, to join Dr. Early who went to Ruth a few months ago to take charge of a hospital there.

Armstrong was beside himself with fury at her words, and Newbold's cool indifference to him personally was unendurable. In battle such as he waged he had the mistaken idea that anything was fair. He could not really tell whether it was love of woman or hate of man that was most dominant; he saw at once the state of affairs between the two. He could hurt the man and the woman with one statement; what might be its ulterior effect he did not stop to consider, perhaps if he had he would not then have cared greatly. He realized anyway that since Newbold's arrival his chance with Enid was gone; perhaps whether Newbold were alive or dead it was gone forever; although Armstrong did not think that, he was not capable of thinking very far into the future in his then condition, the present bulked too large for that.

"I did not think after that kiss in the road that you would go back on me this way, Enid," he said quickly.

"The kiss in the road," cried Newbold staring again at the woman.

"You coward," repeated she, with one swift venomous glance at the other man, and then she turned to her lover. She laid her hand upon his arm, she lifted her face up to him. "As God is my judge," she cried, her voice rising with the tragic intensity of the moment and thrilling with indignant protest, "he took it from me like the thief and the coward he was and he tells it now like the liar he is. We were riding side by side, I was utterly unsuspecting, I thought him a gentleman, he caught me and kissed me before I knew it. I drove him from me. That's all."

"I believe you," said Newbold gently, and then for the first time, he addressed himself to Armstrong. "You came doubtless to rescue Miss Maitland, and in so far your purpose was admirable and you deserve thanks and respect, but no further. This is my cabin, your words and your conduct render you unwelcome here. Miss Maitland is under my protection; if you will come outside I will be glad to talk with you further."

"Under your protection?" sneered Armstrong beside himself. "After a month with you alone I take it she needs no further protection."

Newbold did not leap upon the man for that mordant insult to the woman; his approach was slow, relentless, terrible. Eight or ten feet separated them. Armstrong met him half way, his impetuosity was greater, he sprang forward, turned about, faced the full light from the narrow window.

"Well," he cried, "have you got anything to say or do about it?"

But Newbold had stopped, appalled. He stood staring as if petrified; recognition, recollection rushed over him. Now and at last he knew the man. The face that confronted him was the same face that had stared out at him from the locket he had taken from the bruised breast of his dead wife, which had been a mystery to him for all these years.

"Well," tauntingly asked Armstrong again, "what are you waiting for, are you afraid?"

From Newbold's belt depended a holster and a heavy revolver. As Armstrong made to attack him he flashed it out with astonishing quickness and presented it. The newcomer was unarmed—his Winchester leaned against the wall by his fur coat and he had no pistol.

"If you move a step forward or backward," said Newbold with deadly calm, "I will kill you without mercy."

"So you'd take advantage of a weaponless man, would you?" sneered Armstrong.

"Oh, for God's sake," cried the woman, "don't kill him."

"You both misjudge me," was the answer. "I shall take no advantage of it were necessary, but before the last resort I must have speech with him, and this is the only way in which I can keep him quiet for a moment, if as I suspect, his hate measures with mine."

"You have the advantage," protested Armstrong. "Say your say and get it over with. I've waited all these years for a chance to kill you and my patience is exhausted."

Still keeping the other covered, Newbold stepped over to the table pulled out the drawer and drew from it the locket. Enid remembered she had hastily thrust it there when he had handed it to her, and there it had lain unnoted and forgotten. It was quite evident to her what was toward now. Newbold had recognized the other man, explanations were inevitable. With his left hand Newbold sought the catch of the locket and pressed the spring. In two steps he faced Armstrong with the open locket thrust toward him.

"Your picture?" he asked.

"Mine!"

"Do you know the locket?"

"I gave it to a woman named Louise Rosser five or six years ago."

"My wife."

"Yes, she was crazy in love with me, but—"

With diabolic malice Armstrong left the sentence uncompleted. The inference he meant should be drawn from his reticence was obvious.

"I took it from her dead body," gritted out Newbold.

"She was beside herself with love for me; an old affair, you know," said Armstrong more explicitly, thinking to use a spear with a double barb to pierce the woman's and the man's heart alike. That he defamed the dead was of no moment then. "She wanted to leave you," he ran on glibly. "She wanted me to take her back and—"

"Untrue," burst forth from Enid Maitland's lips. "A slanderous, dastardly, cowardly untruth."

But the man paid no attention to her in their excitement; perhaps they did not even hear her. Newbold thrust his pistol violently forward.

"Would you murder me as you murdered the woman?" glibbed Armstrong in bitter taunt.

Then Enid Maitland found it in her heart to urge Newbold to kill him where he stood, but she had no time if she could have carried out her design, for Newbold flung the weapon from him and the next moment the two men leaped upon each other, straining, struggling, daring, battling like savage beasts, each seeking to clasp his fingers around the throat of the other and then twist and crush until life was gone.

Saying nothing, fighting in a grim silence that was terrible, they reeled crashing about the little room. No two men on earth could have been better matched, yet Newbold had a slight advantage in height and strength, as he had also the advantage in simple life and splendid condition. Armstrong's hate and fierce temper counterbalanced these at first, and with arms locked and legs twined, with teeth clenched and eyes blinded and pulses throbbing and hearts beating, they strove together.

The girl shrank back against the wall and stared frightened. She feared for her lover, she feared for herself. Strange primitive feelings throbbed in her veins. It was an old situation, when two male animals fought for supremacy and the ownership of a female, whose destiny was entirely removed from her own hands.

Armstrong had shown himself in his true colors at last. She would have nothing to hope from him if he was the victor; and she even wondered in terror what might happen to her if the man she loved triumphed after the passions aroused in such a battle? She grew sick and giddy, her bosom rose and fell, her breath came fast as she followed the panting, struggling, clinging grinding, figures about the room.

At first there had been no advantage to either, but now after five minutes—or was it hours?—of fierce fighting, the strength and superior condition of her lover began to tell. He was forcing the other backward. Slowly, inch by inch, foot by foot, step by step, he mastered him. The two intertwining figures were broadside to her now, she could see their faces inflamed by the lust of the battle, engorged, blood red with hate and fury, but there was a look of exultation on one and the shadow of approaching disaster on the other. But the consciousness that he was being mastered ever so little increased Armstrong's determination and he fought back with the frenzy, the strength of a maddened gorilla, and again for a space the issue was in doubt. But not for long.

The table, a heavy cumbersome, four-legged affair, solid almost as a rock, stood in the way. Newbold at last backed Armstrong up against it and by superhuman effort bent him over it, held him with one arm and using the table as a support, wrenched his left hand free, and sunk his fingers around the other's throat. It was all up with Armstrong. It was only a question of time now.

"Now," Newbold guttered out hoarsely, "you slandered the dead woman I married, and you insulted the living one I love. Take back what you said before you die."

"I forgive him," cried Enid Maitland. "Oh, for God's sake don't kill him before my eyes."

Armstrong was past speech. The inveteracy of his hatred could be seen even in his fast glazing eyes, the indomitableness of his purpose yet spoke in the negative shake of his head. He could die, but he would die in his hate and in his purpose.

Enid ran to the two, she grappled Newbold's arm with both her own and strove with all her might to tear it away from the other's throat. Her lover paid no more attention to her than if a summer breeze had touched him. Armstrong grew black in the face, his limbs relaxed, another second or two it would have been over with him.

Once more the door was thrown open; through it two snow-covered men entered. One swift glance told them all. One of them at least had expected it. On the one side Kirkby, on the other Maitland, tore Newbold away from his prey just in time to save Armstrong's life. Indeed the latter was so far gone that he fell from the table to the floor unconscious, choking, almost dying. It was Enid Maitland who received his head in her arms and helped bring him back to life while the panting Newbold stood staring dully at the woman he loved and the man he hated on the floor at his feet.

U. S. GRANT, III.

Son of General Fred Grant
Is a Captain in the Army.

A MILITARY FUNERAL FOR GENERAL GRANT

Body Is at Governor's Island Pending Arrangements.

New York, April 13.—From the Buckingham hotel, where he died, the body of Major General Fred D. Grant, U. S. A., today was taken to Governor's Island. There was no military escort. Captain U. S. Grant III., the only son of General Grant, has come from Washington and is with his mother. U. S. Grant, brother of General Grant, is expected to arrive from San Diego, Cal., in a few days.

While no definite arrangements have been made for the funeral, General Grant will be buried in the memorial cemetery at West Point, for graduates of the academy. The funeral will not be for at least ten days, depending on the arrival of Princess Cantacuzene, daughter of General Grant, who is in Russia. A cablegram was sent to her telling her of her father's death. As soon as the princess gets here the funeral will be held, as arrangements will have been made for it in the meantime. There will be a military funeral. Of course the wishes of the Grant family will be respected, but the plans for the funeral will depend greatly on what government and civic officials may wish to do. Until the arrival of the princess the body of General Grant will lie in the chapel of Cornelius the Centurion on Governor's Island, under military guard. The death certificate ascribes the death of General Grant as having been due to a clot of blood on the heart.

AGRICULTURE TO BE GIVEN BOOST

It Will Be Taught in Indiana High Schools.

AMENDED COURSE OF STUDY

State Board of Education Has Adopted a Resolution Enabling High Schools to Introduce Agriculture or Other Phases of Industrial Training as a Part of the Regular Course—Other Recommendations to High Schools.

Indianapolis, April 13.—The state board of education has adopted a resolution amending the state course of study for high schools to enable them to introduce agriculture or other phases of industrial training as a part of the regular course. In granting the privilege, however, the state board kept its hand on high school affairs so as to prevent the industrial training enthusiasts from "running to seed" or on such training, to the exclusion of languages, mathematics and the like.

The course for a commissioned high school under the amendment will provide for three units in English; two in foreign languages, two in mathematics and one in natural science as a basis. Two more units may be selected by the pupil from those named, and four more may be selected under the direction of the high school authorities.

In addition, four units of history or natural science may be substituted in the place of mathematics or foreign language, when authority is given by the state board of education. Under the provisions, industrial training may be made an important factor in any commissioned high school in the state. Provision was made for such training in accredited high schools on a corresponding basis, the accredited high school having shorter terms and one year less than the commissioned high school.

REGISTRATION

Indiana Voters Confronted by a New Duty This Year.

Indianapolis, April 13.—The first day of this year on which the registration of voters in Indiana will be made under the new registration law passed by the last legislature is May 9. There will be a registration place in each voting precinct in the state, and under the law no man has any legal right to vote at any general election who has not duly registered as a voter.

Sessions of the registration boards also will be held on Sept. 6 and Oct. 7. The voter may register at any one of these sessions, but he is not required to register more than once unless he changes his place of residence. If he moves after having registered he must at the next session register in the precinct into which he has moved. The law does not say anything in regard to how voters absent on registration days may be registered.

It is provided in the law that the registration board in each precinct shall open its session at 5 o'clock a. m. and remain in session until 6 o'clock p. m., and if applications for registration are received at the rate of one every five minutes after that hour the board shall remain in session, but not later than 8 o'clock.

It is up to the board of county commissioners to select and provide the registration places in the various precincts of their counties.

A SAFEGUARD

This Minister Is Not Going to Take Chances on Misfits.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 13.—The Rev. S. D. Dutcher, pastor of the Central Christian church, announces that after May 1 he will require a physician's certificate for the bridegroom before he will perform a marriage ceremony. "More than once have I married a couple through ignorance and seen the wife have a miserable existence, because the husband was unfit to be married," said Mr. Dutcher.

Burglar Got Better of It.

Lafayette, Ind., April 13.—John Reifers had a thrilling encounter with a burglar when he awakened from sleep and found a man rifling his clothes. He sprang up and seized the intruder. The two men battled for fifteen minutes, and finally both fell through the window which the burglar had opened to obtain entrance. Reifers clung to his man until he was exhausted. The burglar then managed to get to his feet and ran away, taking with him $25 from Reifers' pockets.

A Hint as to the Defense.

Bloomfield, Ind., April 13.—The defense when it cross-examined the first witness in the case of the state against Slater Edward and Roy Stibbins, charged with murdering their father, George W. Stibbins, indicated that an attempt will be made to prove that the father was insane and committed suicide.

SAY REPUTATION OF COOK WAS BAD

from day to day. Friday the court room was crowded beyond its capacity and people stood in the aisles and doorways.

Emmons Low, the last witness for the State yesterday, finished his testimony after dinner Friday by recalling the names of five persons with whom he had talked about Cook's dying statement. In the forenoon attorneys for the defense asked Low why he had kept this matter secret. He could not at that time recall the names of any person with whom he talked about the statement.

The testimony of Low was damaging to the theory of the defense as outlined in the opening statement of the attorneys for the accused. According to that statement Price claims he had reason to believe that Cook intended to leave the farm, where he had been living as a tenant of Price's, taking with him certain old furniture which belonged to Price. It was to prevent the taking of this furniture that he went to the farm on the morning of the murder.

According to Low's testimony, the witness had arranged to move Cook's few household effects away on Tuesday, taking them to North Vernon, where the Cook family would take a train for North Carolina. On the Saturday before this Tuesday Low had a short talk with Price in which the latter told him that the furniture belonged to him. Low told Price that he would not move anything that Price said belonged to him.

On the day before the murder, he told Price, "I won't haul anything you said belonged to you. I told him I would not begin hauling until the middle of the morning, and he would have plenty of time in which to replevin the stuff if Cook tried to take it away."

On cross examination Attorney Fitzgerald for the defense charged Low with manufacturing this evidence. Low admitted that he had taken a great deal of interest in the case and had talked to many persons about it.

He had tried to raise money to hire Judge New to assist in the prosecution, saying that the reason he had done this was because "New is a big gun, and Price has you and other big guns, and I wanted to see both sides equally represented." He had done this also, he said, because "people were talking of a mob and I'd rather drive all over the country to prevent a mob."

Silas Baker, George Trulo and Jesse Burgess told of caring for Cook immediately after the shooting.

Jesse Burgess gave one bit of important evidence. He said that where Cook had fallen after the shooting was only about five or six steps away from the barn door. Burgess is the son-in-law of Fred Price, a brother of the accused.

Dora Neal told of his appointment to go to the Cook home on the day before the shooting to get a load of corn. It rained all that day and he arranged to go on Tuesday. This explains the point made by the State that when Price drove into the barn yard Cook took the rig to be that of Neal's.

Lawyers who knew Mrs. Mary Yeager-Smith, the school teacher who saw the shooting from the roadway near the Cook home, could not wholly abandon the habit of calling Mrs. Smith by her maiden name.

Mrs. Smith was married April 7, just six days ago, and she appeared on the witness stand Friday morning in the bright spring attire which suggested a honeymoon.

Mrs. Smith taught the White Oak school across the road from the Cook home. On the morning of the shooting she was coming down the road toward the school house. Suddenly she heard a shot and then another and another and another. She saw Mrs. Cook come out on the porch and heard her scream, but she did not see a gun in her hands.

The witness slapped her gloved hands to indicate to the jury the successive sounds of the shots as they came to her ears. There was a slight pause between the first and second shots, but the other two were fired almost simultaneously.

Mrs. Smith described in detail her movements that morning and varied little from her first narrative when cross examined by the defense.

NO TRACE OF FICHTNER.

No trace has yet been found of John Fichtner who wandered away from his home at Batesville two weeks ago Thursday. It was thought that the missing man had been found at Sandusky. Chester Meyer, Ed and Henry Severinghaas of Batesville went to see the man held there but it was not Fichtner. The local police had a tip in this case, but it proved to be a false one.

—The Misses Belma Clark and Gladys Henley went to Carthage last evening to spend the week end with friends.

Thomas Clark of near Clarksburg was stricken with paralysis while driving the school wagon Thursday afternoon. He is in a critical condition.

CONNERSVILLE TO IMPROVE PARK

Eastern City Arranges to Spend Several Thousand Dollars on Donated Site.

WORK IS ALREADY STARTED

Drives, Pillars at Entrances, Shrubbery and Plants Will be Used in Adornment.

Connerville has a city park. It is larger than Rushville's but not so beautiful, nor is it so advantageously situated. But Connerville has appreciated the park enough to improve it. Now further plans are being carried out to beautify it.

The committee in charge of the work planned to plant flowers and shrubs promiscuously. It was intended to plant shrubbery around the north, south and west edges of the park, set so thick as to form a living wall, while within the purlieus of the place itself fully sixty varieties of shrubs were to be planted, besides numerous trees and other plants.

But the park committee ran up against a serious obstacle. It was that of water supply at the park. After casting about in every direction, and gathering all the facts attainable in the matter, the committee and their helpers reluctantly came to the conclusion that any practical method of supplying water to the park would be entirely too expensive for them to undertake. The idea, therefore, was abandoned, and with it went a considerable part of the extensive and attractive program of improvement which they had planned.

For example, the great number of various shrubs and flowers which they purposed to plant had to be stricken off the improvement list, at this time, for these plants must have water, regularly, and in generous quantities. Some, of particular varieties, will be planted, indeed, but most of the money which was to have been used in this way will be diverted to the construction of walks and beautification of the gateways and the fitting up of several devices for children's amusement. All this, while it obliges the radical change of the improvement scheme and has caused considerable annoyance and extra work, will perhaps be nearly as acceptable to the people, when accomplished, as the original aim would have been.

The plan of improvement agreed upon provides for entrances at the northwest and southwest corners of the park, at the north side in line with the Waterloo road, paralleling Beeson's addition and at the west side at the point where the train stops during the Free Fair. The latter entrance will be for pedestrians only, and will open upon a long irregular gravel walk which will end at the central pavilion. The other entrance will be for all manner of vehicles and will open into beautiful drives. All the four points of entry will be guarded by time defying sentinels, in the shape of tall, massive pillars, either of artistically formed cement or of well-lain boulders.

Mr. Walker of the firm of Walker & Sandusky, landscape architects, of Cincinnati, who was here, drew the plans for the improvement. He submitted sketches for the improvement which were accepted with some minor changes. As the planting season will probably open within a few days and not last more than a few weeks at the longest, the committee will place an order for the trees and shrubbery at once.

"The Store That Satisfies"

WILL BE LIGHTEST CROP IN 30 YEARS

to let their fields stand idle. They must have them producing something. The favorite crop is corn. It is surer than oats, but it takes much more work to grow a corn crop than an oats crop. Furthermore, nearly every farmer had already set apart for corn about all the ground he could tend. Many will increase their corn acreage, but with most of them the big increase will be in oats."

It is said Rush county farmers were never before confronted with as heavy a burden of spring work as they are this year. With practically no plowing done for either corn or oats, with the time at hand when oats ought to be in the ground and with corn-planting time less than a month away, they simply are put to the necessity of putting every minute possible in their fields. The big job is to get their "field breaking" done. Every farmer has all the plows he can martial going.

The fine weather of the last week has been a great help and there was a fervent hope throughout the countryside that it will continue. Other spring work will have to wait as long as the ground is in condition to be worked. In one respect the cold winter was a help. The ground was frozen to an unusual depth and remained in that condition three or four months. As a result, now that it has thawed, it is loose and mellow and "breaks" easily.

Although disappointed over the wheat failure, the farmers are not discouraged. They learned years ago not to depend heavily on wheat. If the weather will give them a fair chance they will work out of their difficulty in good season. They are not complaining, but merely asking for a chance to do the work that is before them.

KEEP CHICKENS IN YOUR OWN BACKYARD

There is a State Law Against Allowing Fowls to Run at Large in Corporate Limits.

MANY COMPLAINTS TO POLICE

There is a State law against allowing chickens to wander at large over your neighbor's premises. The warm spring weather has resulted in a number of complaints being made to the police. A number of persons have threatened to file charges if their neighbors do not keep their chickens in their own coops. This is an annual spring event with the police force, as chickens will wander when nice days appear. The statute provides chickens shall not be allowed to run at large in the corporate limits of any city. The police say no further warning will be given owners.
